

GUATEMALA - THE HIGHLANDS AND TIKAL

In the last two decades of stable government and insurgent-free existence, Guatemala has made great strides in ecotourism and is rapidly becoming the new birding Mecca in Central America. This comparatively small country embraces seven main ecosystems and accordingly a remarkably varied selection of birds (over 700 species, many of them iconic) including many regional endemics (of which we tallied 30). This new WINGS tour visited as many sites as possible in 10 relaxed days. We enjoyed such vistas of outstanding natural beauty as the breathtaking volcano-fringed lake Atitlán, the charm of 16th- and 17th-century Antigua, a sequence of private nature reserves created on coffee fincas, offering comfortable accommodation and wholesome food, and the world-famous Tikal national park. Daily dazzles included orioles, euphonias, hummingbirds, tanagers, trogons, toucans, aracarís, motmots, parrots and parakeets – the very epitome of tropical birds – complemented by a showy selection of wintering North American warblers (28 of them, including the highly sought-after Golden-cheeked).

Abiding images include a sunlit tree at Rincon Suizo decorated as if for Christmas with Pink-headed Warbler, Red-faced Warbler, Crescent-chested Warbler, Wilson's, Townsend's, Olive, Yellow, Tennessee, Hermit, Black-and-White, Bushtit, Hutton's Vireo, Brown Creeper, Tufted Flycatcher, Slate-throated Redstart and other baubles. A stunning, unreal selection. Or Red-capped Manakins outblossoming the brightest bromeliad. Or parrots and parakeets not just as fly-bys but perched to reveal how they earned their names – red lores, white crowns, white foreheads, yellow napes, olive throats, orange foreheads, orange chins. Or trogons as lusciously ripe and motionless as fruit in the foliage. Or hummingbirds (Azure-crowned, Magnificent and Rufous Sabrewing) on the feeders as we too enjoyed an elegant buffet lunch. But the grand climax was surely Tikal – sitting atop Temple IV with a pair of Orange-breasted Falcons on the scaffolding just above us and a Crested Guan on a treetop below us; the army ants with the accompanying fearless feeding frenzies of acrobatic leapfrogging woodcreepers interspersed with Grey-headed Tanagers and Red-crowned and Red-throated Ant-Tanagers; the “rare and elusive” Ocellated Turkeys wandering around the ruins like chickens in a farmyard; or just quiet walks along the forest trails to come across yet another temple, row of stelae, or limestone slab recording the capture of the ruler Wilan Tok Wayib by the Tikal ruler Yik'in Chan Kawil on December 8, 748 AD. And all this while encountering one exciting avian speciality after another: Great Curassow, King Vulture, Ruddy Quail-Dove, Yucatan Nightjar, White-bellied Emerald, Violaceous Trogon, Keel-billed Toucan, Pale-billed and Lineated Woodpeckers, Eye-ringed Flatbill, Royal and Sulphur-rumped Flycatchers, Rufous Mourner, Tawny-crowned and Lesser Greenlets, White-bellied Wren, Yellow-breasted Chat, Black-throated Shrike Tanager, Green-backed Sparrow, Black-cowled Oriole, Olive-backed Euphonia... This must be one of the world's best birding sites.

In itemizing a score or more of species like that, it is significant to recall how each site on our itinerary yielded a different set of specialities. El Pilar gave us Collared Trogon, Guatemalan (Northern) Flicker, Blue-headed Vireo, Bushy-crested Jay, Eastern Bluebird, Black and Rufous-collared Robins, Blue-and white Mockingbird, Gray Silky-flycatcher, Chestnut-sided and Golden-cheeked Warblers, Elegant Euphonia, Black-headed Siskin, Lesser Goldfinch and the easily-overlooked endemic Hooded Grosbeak. Rincon Suizo, in addition to our bauble tree, offered Band-tailed Pigeon, White-eared Hummingbird, Mountain Trogon, Spot-crowned Woodcreeper, Steller's Jay, Rufous-browed Wren and a proliferation of Acorn Woodpeckers. Los Andes, most remembered for the Blue-tailed hummingbirds and Provost's Ground-Sparrows outside our rooms, added Highland Guan, Broad-winged and Short-tailed Hawks, Crested Caracara, Red-billed pigeon, Pacific Parakeet, Emerald Toucanet, Common Tody-Flycatcher and Yellow-throated Euphonia. Our day around Lake Atitlán produced Ruddy Duck, Brown Pelican (“rare far offshore”), Yellow-naped Parrot, Lesser Roadrunner, Sparkling-tailed hummingbird, Black Phoebe, a Brown-backed Solitaire finally perched in the open, White-throated Magpie-Jay, MacGillivray's and Rufous-capped Warblers and Black-vented Oriole. Los Tarrales overwhelmed us with White-bellied Chachalaca, Orange-chinned and Orange-fronted Parakeets, Squirrel Cuckoo, Long-billed Starthroat, Cinnamon Hummingbird, Blue-crowned and Turquoise-browed Motmots, Collared Aracari, Barred Antshrike, Rufous-breasted Spinetail, Northern Bentbill, Paltry Tyrannulet, Rose-throated Becard, Rufous-naped Wren, Golden-crowned Warbler, White-winged Tanager, Scrub Euphonia, Red-legged Honeycreeper, Spot-breasted and Altamira Orioles – but most of all Long-tailed Manakin, Tody Motmot, and Blue-throated Goldentail. Even Yaxha, the impressive Maya site which gave us a foretaste of Tikal, offered different birds: Laughing Falcon, Ornate Hawk-eagle, Scaly-breasted Hummingbird, Purple-crowned fairy, White-whiskered Puffbird, Buff-throated Foliage-Cleaner, Bright-rumped Attila and Blue Bunting.

Yet the lasting impression is not merely of a sequence of colourful and exotic species but of a beautiful country with a warm and welcoming population anxious to protect the environment and provide a happy and satisfying experience for visiting birdwatchers and ecotourists in general. The Guatemala Tourism Board promotes the slogan “Guatemala, soul of the earth” – and that’s a good summary.
